

HOW DO I ASK SOMEONE IF THEY ARE SAFE AT HOME?

ARE YOU SAFE AT HOME?

It can be hard to know what to do if you're worried someone in your life is unsafe.

Simply asking, listening to, and believing them can have a big impact.

This flow chart is only a guide. Approach the conversation in a way that feels right.

1. ASK

“Are you safe at home?”

“I’m worried about you. Is everything ok?”

“Are things ok in your relationship?”

- Ask the question, this can make a real difference
- Wait for a moment alone together
- Be patient, understanding and kind
- Don't make them talk if they're not ready to
- Try to talk to them in person
- Avoid asking over text or email, as this may not be safe
- Walking or sitting side by side can make talking easier

If someone is in immediate danger ask if they want you to call triple zero (000)

2. LISTEN

“I’m fine”

“I don’t want to talk about it”

“No, I’m not safe”

“I’m scared”

- Don't interrupt
- Don't judge

- It's ok to ask again later, if you're still worried

- Letting them know you are there for them can be really helpful
- They may not be ready to talk about it yet
- They may prefer to talk to someone else
- Offer to help them find a support service
- Respect their choices

- Remember abuse is never their fault
- Tell them they have choices and offer to help them figure out what to do next
- They might not be ready to take action, don't pressure them
- Understand that it can take time for them to leave safely
- Help them find and connect with support services safely, such as offering your phone to make a call

3. BELIEVE

- You don't need to be an expert
- You can connect them with support

“Ok. You can talk to me if anything changes”

“That’s okay, I’m here if you change your mind”

“Is there anything I can do to support you?”

“You can talk to me anytime”

“Do you feel comfortable to talk about it?”

“That behaviour is not okay”

“Are you in danger right now?”

“You don’t deserve to be treated that way”

“I believe you. Thank you for trusting me”

“Let’s find some information and look at your options”
